Who it is for

It starts with people who are: chamber people, city managers, council members, Main Street people, economic developers - those people whose job responsibilities include some form of 'looking out for the town.'

But it's not just those people. It's also the small town community members, small business owners, entrepreneurs, non-profit organizations, church members, students, seniors and anyone who lives in a small town who wants to see change. You don't need to be licensed, degreed, or paid to create the community you want to live in.
